

Storytelling to Storywriting: The Turning Points Process Continued

As this year's Northland Rec Lab Discussion Leader, I will be sharing my personal narrative model called Turning Points to help participants find, share and tell stories about important events in their lives. If you are someone who would like to take these stories from Telling to Writing, these follow-up workshops are for you. I will offer tips and tools for writing personal stories that include creating a strong lead, deciding on important details, creating a flow of events, revising and editing, asking for and giving feedback, and using a universal truth for giving your story deeper meaning.

of people per class you can accommodate	Any number! No limit
of class periods a project takes	3
of sessions offered during the week	3 consecutive sessions will be offered
Est. cost	No cost
Equipment needed	I will have composition books and pens for all. Bring a workbook and notes from morning discussion sessions. If you have a special book or journal you like to write in, bring that as well!
Special Safety concerns?	None
Questions before lab?	Contact Jen Strauss: jenifer@storybetold.com